When CONSULAR CUP; presented; value 8friends can pay a part of the cost they are expected to do so; when the child is atterly desti-tute he is received free. While the sum received in subscriptions has remained about the same, the charitable work has trebled in ten years, the deficioney being borne by the fees. It is most desirable that the Institution should be placed on a self-supporting basis, but to do this, without diminishing the charitable work, it will be nocessary to have a larger building, thereby saving the rent (850 a month) of the other house, and providing additional schoolrooms, dining room, lavatories, &c., which have long been most urgently needed. We have land and the scholars and only need the funds wherewith to build." Now I believe that this time last year, when General Cameron presided at the prize-giving in this school, he made a suggestion that a fund should be started, to be called the Diocesan Home Buil ling Fund, which would be altogether separate from the ordinary subscription fund to which people are asked to subscribe in this Colony every year. This will at any rate make a commencement. Another idea has also struck me. Seeing that the Amateur Dramatic Society of this Colony are always willing to support deserving charitable institutions such as this, I feel convinced that if the committee were to ask them to give a special performance of their very amusing pantomime for this object, they would do so; or at any rate if they could not see their way to giving a special performance they might perhaps be inclined to devote a portion of the proceeds over and above expenses that they are likely to make with the pantomime. I am glad that the object becomes known many others will come forward and subscribe towards it. It is very antisfactory to know that the health of this school has been so good during the past year, seeing that sickness has been prevalent in the colony, and I think this speaks most highly for The year has been a very encommend and prosperous the care and attention that must have been one. very advanced state in China; but as in all countries, so here the people are familiar with many simples and simple remedies; notably acupunoture and counter-irritation, carried often to absurd extremes. Many a gaugrene and many a mass of corruption owe their existence to the use of the needle on an otherwise simple wound or boil. Counter-irritation is practised in many ways. A oup of burning wine is inverted on the forehead of a child suffering from convulsions. Sore eyes are frequently treated by putting plasters on the sides of the temples. Pinching is the commonest method, being the remedy specific to all the minor ills that Chinese flesh is heir to. If there is a head wind in the latter case we can still get on, though with preportionate difficulty But in the lakes there is no tracking and if the wind is unfavourable we cannot move. So we remained three days at Lich'eng; the first day it rained, the second it blew and on the third was a dead calm. Several boatloads of refugees arrived at the anchorage on the same day as > its moorings and wrecked. These refugees are from Hauchou in the Kiangan province—a city on the S. bank of what used to be the Yellow River- Their destination, they say, is Nanking, and they bring with them mountain produce, chestnuts, walnuts, etceters. But their merchandise cannot mean much to them; their boat, overgrowded with human freight, could carry but a small store of these commodities, a Targe quantity of which would represent but a small turnover in cash. These men do not appear to possess much in common with their fellow provincials from the south but approximate to the Shantungese ra-raged in the second night the inevitable hapther than to the Nankingese. They are more open, sturdy, honest looking altogether more prepossessing than the riverine and mountain provincials. They call themselves refugees (bungered people) and notwithstanding the nuts. the term probably describes them with a fair degree of accuracy. Whatever they may appear to their fellow countrymen, to a foreigner they have reached a depth of wretchedness impossible at home. Yet in all their hunger, cold, and nakedness they present a cheerfulness which makes it difficult to estimate their real condition. On the fourth morning we were off early and under a biting wind reached Chiangchü or, more popularly. Chiangchiap a busy market town on a little island in the Hungtsé Lake. A lively trade in fish and water fowl is carried on here, and all day long fishing and fowling boats keep arriving to discharge their cargoes under the inspection of the oustom-house officials—a tax of a few hundred cash per picul is levied on the fish. The wild fowl, principally ducks. is shipped to Yangohow and Chinkiang; the fish is salted on the spot or sold fresh to the people on the mainland. The harbour is snug, running behind one of the extremities of the island; the outer bank of the sheltering promontory, having a stone facing to protect it during storms. The latter must be very large though hardly so extensive as the inhabitants of the village would have us believe. " Large" said one, a man of many winters, "yes, extends over thousands of li!"

There we emjoyed another day's wait but pressed for a start on the second morning. Several boats left with or before us, but what with a dead calm, an opposing ourrent, and a soft bottom to the lake most of them returned, leaving us to pursue our course alone. The boatmen do not care to anchor alone, fearing the robbers, the lake, as they say, being "not clean" at any time but worse this year on account of the bad harvests which are complained of every where. We persevered, however, and at nightfall reached the well sheltered harhour at Lactzeshun, a little place only important for the magnificent shelter it affords to the lake shipping. It has its name, we were told, from the fact that here the founder of the Taoists, succeeded in producing the "philosopher's stone." "When?" I enquired. NOW ON SALE. IMPERIAL QUARTO. NGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDAEIN

PRONUNCIATION. an Angle Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical services this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously ttained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast seeps of the work the required.

The Steamer has splendid Accommodation, should be marked to address in full; and the chinese characters, and Medhurst's English same will be received by us until 5 P.M. the Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese characters. this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely regaires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitheric pub-

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English [165] to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested

China it cannot but be invaluable occasion. It comprises upwards of two thousand large 166 quarto pages.
